Michael P. Green (Ph.D., University of North Texas) is associate professor of practical theology and director of supervised ministries at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School. He speaks regularly in churches, at mission and Bible conferences, and at retreats. Green lives in Libertyville, Illinois.

This is a good reference. I have enjoyed using it every now and then when I need to come up with a good illustration for a concept I'm teaching. Sometimes, the ideas in this book actually help me think of illustrations from my own life to draw from, so it has been helpful in that way too.

A very practical Pastor's vade mecum. It has given stimulant to my sermons. In fact I have given it as a precious gift to a pastor growing under me. The illustrations are clean and alphabetical cum topical arrangements of issues make the book easy to use. Jesus spoke by illustrations called parables. This book is along Christ's homiletical course. Bravo.

It's a very good book! It helps me telling concepts that relates to the verses I preach on :) Highly excellent service and books

Great for preachers and teachers

We all need a good story. We need to people our exposition with the concrete. The listeners are o/k/ with saying, there was this man that... or I am told that ..., knowing that the preacher is using a storehouse of wisdom. Preaching is not about one's own special story, but about clearly and in an entertaining manner telling our shared experience and needs. This type of book is a must for all who preach or speak.
